Organization and Administration of Highly Evolved Being Worlds

As I was asked for write about, I am going to write about the organization and administration of highly evolved beings worlds. As I have told before, Highly Evolved Beings (mainly Anunnaki, Gods and several other highly evolved species) have an organizational-administrative system that are really closer to what humans call as communism, socialism, anarchism and even mutualism. So, in this article, I will explain, why does their systems look like those ones I mentioned before.

First of all, one of the main characteristics we can mention in all of them, is the stewardship in place of private property, there is no private property in their worlds, of course there is still personal property, like abodes and temples, but it is not private property. It is one of the main characteristics of them. That makes then being considered as communist for do not have private property, but stewardship, and anarchist (anarcho-communist) in some cases, since some worlds do not have monarchy neither rulership.

The second one, which walks united of the first one, is the self-management. Their worlds are organized by self-management, being also referred as mutualism. Where they share all their resources and help each other with their needs, where everyone is beneficed by this, and also, treating their own world and resources as a part of the universe and world they are, that they are also there. So, it makes strengths the fact they are communist and even mutualist, since on mutualism you have stewardship by free associations and / or by syndicates / trade unions (syndicalism).

And about the interactions with the other worlds, the interactions are always beneficial for both sides, each world can exchange their products by others or even give their products to others, a mix of mutualism with gift economy. But always the worlds already have what they need, they are always self-sufficiency and do not have lack of the products, the commercial interactions actually exist, but they are uncommon.

As we can see, I tried to be the most direct I could on this article, without avoid long explanations, we can conclude that we already have a north for we follow for help Earth and humans, highly evolved beings have a system that is closer to communism, socialism, anarchism and even mutualism and syndicalism. So, it already shows what humans should follow in case they want to evolve, of course, any of those ways can have the same results, since they actually use highly evolved beings as example.
